

THE SOCIALISTS OF PARIS.

They Will Make a Grand Demonstration the First of May.

TIMID PEOPLE VERY BADLY SCARED.

The Minister of the Interior Announces His Determination to Suppress It—Stanley Passes Through Rome.

[Copyright 1890 by James Gordon Bennett.] PARIS, April 11.—[New York Herald Cable—Special to The Bee.]—Parisians are beginning to look ahead to the first day of the month of May with some apprehension. On the one hand are arrayed the forces of socialism, men resolved to show by an imposing demonstration that their demands are not such as cannot be lightly set aside, and on the other they are centered in Constans, whose firmness has become almost proverbial among his countrymen. All the powers of law and order as represented by thousands of police and soldiers the minister of the interior, it will be remembered, has declared his intention of using to prevent any demonstration of the kind, and he has even what it may be called a declaration of the government of the Paris socialists are working with a will to organize their demonstration despite M. Constans and all his police and soldiers. They vow they will meet in such numbers that the powers vested in the government will pale into insignificance by comparison.

It is that timid people are already heard asking if it will be safe to venture into the streets to breathe the balmy air of May, and if it is not probable or at least possible that these streets will run with gore. For the last fortnight meetings have been held every third day in different quarters of Paris, and handbills by hundreds and thousands have been distributed. These handbills set forth the objects of the demonstration, chief among which are a reduction in the hours of the working day to eight, the limitation of female and child labor and the suppression of night labor. The document goes on to recount how the idea of holding this demonstration or protest of the universe was mooted at the international socialist congress, which met in Paris in July, 1889, and at which were present the best known socialists of the world, among the number being Babel, Liebknecht, Costa, Cunningham, Graham, John Burns and the whole elite of the French socialist army. May 1 was fixed as the date of the universal demonstration of labor and the same date was chosen as the grand annual feast of the laboring world. It was unanimously decided that the toilers of all countries represented at the congress shall demand the public powers to give satisfaction to their just claims, and the following rider was added: "That the demonstration will be for the first time a revolution of the gigantic world, which has been accomplished for the masses of toilers since the commune was crushed, and the necessary outcome of which will be the advent of a new socialistic order of things."

Each country was left to determine what kind of a demonstration suited its own purposes. In France the idea was received with enthusiasm among the socialists, and the municipal council even promised moral and pecuniary support, as in the case of the councilors of Saint Etienne, who voted 5,000 francs for the purchase of a banner. In Germany, where the authorities have decided to quash any attempt at a demonstration, the latest news is that there is a split in the socialist ranks, Babel and Liebknecht being opposed to the scheme. In Austria the strikes now in progress are believed to be an angry of what May 1 will bring forth. In Belgium the demonstration is expected to be a notable one, and even in Norway an agitation is in progress.

With reference particularly to Paris, Jules Guesde, son-in-law of Karl Marx, whose mantle has descended upon his shoulders, declared to a reporter that the demonstration would be grandiose. "We shall number 200,000 toilers," he continued, "200,000 resolute men who will crowd the streets of this capital. The government have announced its intention of dispersing this army of men by force, 500 men, not 200,000. However, we desire our demonstration to be quite pacific, and if some among us forget this fact it will be a misfortune. But I am confident that the good sense of the Parisian workmen will obviate such an eventuality."

M. Ferroul, Boyer, Baudin, Lachitz, Thivrier, Francoise and Ousert, who comprise the socialist group in the chamber of deputies, profess to share Guesde's confidence on the success of the demonstration, but M. Joffrin, the labor candidate, whose political opponents still nickname the elect of a minority, in consequence of his sitting as a deputy for Montmartre instead of Boulogne, is inclined to be sceptical. "An impression is being made," he is reported to say today, "Many of the leading spirits of the demonstration are Boulangists and have no influence on the vast body of workmen. We shall see that the French workman will not lay down his tools and quit work in the middle of the week."

Stanley Passes Through Rome. [Copyright 1890 by James Gordon Bennett.] ROME, April 11.—[New York Herald Cable—Special to The Bee.]—Stanley passed through Rome today on route to Cannes, and was received at the station by United States Minister Porter, the duke of Salaparuta, Marchese Vitelleschi, Signor Mayo, for Signor Crisp, the members of the Geographical society, General Branciforti and others. There was a great ovation on Stanley alighting from the train. Stanley was presented with a gold medal by the Geographical society. In reply he excused himself from making a speech, as he was very tired by his voyage, and he looks tired. He spoke very little, but thanked the society for the medal. He was presented to many notables and expressed a hope to return some day to Rome. The former Italian consul to Zanzibar hoped Mr. Stanley would take the direction of East Africa under England and agreed a happy future for that country under such energetic management. Stanley continued his journey after one hour's delay. He was glad to meet his old friend Ezekiel, the well known sculptor at Rome.

A New York Lady Injured. [Copyright 1890 by James Gordon Bennett.] ROME, April 11.—[New York Herald Cable—Special to The Bee.]—An accident has happened to Mrs. Robert Joland of New York, who is staying at the Hotel d'Alte. The lady, with five other persons, was driven in an omnibus from the hotel to the railway station, en route for Florence, when one of the wheels of the carriage came off as the piazza term was reached. With a crash the omnibus was shattered to pieces and the baggage on top was brought down on the unfortunate occupants of the interior. All, however, escaped with slight bruises except Mrs. Joland, who was cut about the head and otherwise severely hurt. In an unconscious state she was carried back to the hotel, where she now lies under the care of a physician.

Rome Crowded with Americans. [Copyright 1890 by James Gordon Bennett.] ROME, April 11.—[New York Herald Cable—Special to The Bee.]—The city is full of Americans, among whom I may mention General William Warner, late senator from Alabama; Lieutenant W. Hay, United States navy; E. A. Hoffman, jr., of New York city; and Countess DeBrazza, of New Orleans, of New York.

Archbishop Corrigan to Visit the Pope. [Copyright 1890 by James Gordon Bennett.] ROME, April 11.—[New York Herald Cable—Special to The Bee.]—Mr. Corrigan, archbishop of New York, arrived here yesterday. Today he visited Cardinal Simoni, prefect of the propaganda, and will soon have an audience with the pope. The strictest secrecy is kept regarding Corrigan's mission.

KARA CRUELITIES. An English Medical Journal Gives Details of Madam Sigida's Case. LONDON, April 11.—[Special Telegram to The Bee.]—The well known English medical journal, the Lancet, in this week's number presents at some length such details of the atrocities to which political prisoners at Kara, in eastern Siberia, were subjected last November, as one of special interest to medical men and to those who are devoted to the cause of humanity. Madam Sigida, who died from the effects of a flogging, Dr. Gurvich, the prison physician, was strongly opposed to the flogging. He furnished the governor of the prison with a certificate setting forth that Madam Sigida was receiving treatment at his hands for heart disease, and that long-term custody for prison officials to accept such a certificate as sufficient warrant for suspending the infliction of corporal punishment, but the order was given by the governor of the province of the Amur, directing that the prison rules should be rigidly enforced in the case of political prisoners, the governor of the prison decided that the flogging should be administered in spite of the physicians. Dr. Gurvich thereupon remonstrated strongly with the governor, but the flogging was nevertheless carried out. Despite these remonstrances the lady was rudely seized, her clothes were stripped from her in the presence of the soldiers, and she was laid on a bench and held down while 100 cruel blows fell upon her bare back. The Lancet applauds Dr. Gurvich for his refusal to accept a certificate of this kind, and if he is persecuted for the stand he took, the Lancet thinks that the physicians of England unite in some action to effect his rescue.

THE DIVIDED BRETHREN. Escher and Anti-Escher Camps Sorry for Each Other. CHICAGO, April 11.—At the Sheffield avenue church the anti-Escher branch of the Illinois conference of the German Evangelical conference met this morning, with the president, Rev. D. B. Byers, in the chair. Outside of routine preliminary work, the appointment of standing committees, etc., the most interesting feature of the session was the adoption of a preamble and resolution setting forth the cause of the division, deploring the action of the Escher branch, and expressing the regret of their own, declaring any offices held by them to be vacant and assuring the anti-Escher branch that they would remain in the fold until they would return.

Revs. William Caton, S. E. Entorf and C. A. Faith were elected trustees to take the place of the Escher branch. The anti-Escher branch adjourned at noon for two hours, to accept the constitution and a writ of replevin on Secretary Stamm's appeal. The delegates of the Escher branch accepted the service, to appear before a justice April 22 to answer the writ.

In the afternoon the secretary was instructed to send an address to the faction in session at the Wisconsin street church notifying the Escher branch of their intention of traveling during the next conference of the Escher branch, and to consider their standing without appointment.

The Escher faction today went ahead transacting business as if there was no other conference in existence. The delegates are elated over the fact that their conference was recognized by the Escher branch, and that the Escher branch, who paid them a dividend today. The committee sent to the Sheffield avenue conference with a request for records, etc., returned with the report that the Escher branch had referred to a committee. Bishop Escher will have to confront upon his return to Winfield will be that of complicity in criminal malpractice, resulting in the death of Miss Alpha Kins, the daughter of Charles Ellis of Sedan, Kan. Mr. Ellis is prominent in politics and was district clerk at Sedan a short time ago.

A special from Arkansas City, Kan., to-night says: "Miss Alpha Kins of Sedan, Kan., came to this city March 25 and stopped at the Peckham hotel. She was a lady of about 30 years of age, and was the daughter of her brother-in-law's bank at Sedan, and a leader in society, though only twenty years of age. She became ill about 10 o'clock this afternoon at 2 o'clock she died. Her father was with her in her last moments, but her mother was sick at home. Her sister had also been with her up to the time of the father's arrival. Her father took the remains home on the day of her death, and on Monday morning the body was taken to the Peckham hotel. It was learned today that the charge which the young attorney will have to confront upon his return to Winfield will be that of complicity in criminal malpractice, resulting in the death of Miss Alpha Kins, the daughter of Charles Ellis of Sedan, Kan. Mr. Ellis is prominent in politics and was district clerk at Sedan a short time ago.

The body of Miss Ellis will be disinterred and a post-mortem held. She was an intelligent and attractive young lady. She acted as deputy district clerk, having sole charge of the office for a time under her father. She was reported to have been a member of the Red Cross at its state meeting, and was of a highly respected family.

The Death Roll. MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., April 11.—[Special Telegram to The Bee.]—Judge von Schlegel of this city died this morning. He was a cousin of General von Caprivi, chancellor of Germany.

PHILADELPHIA, April 11.—George H. Stuart, for many years prominent in commercial, financial and religious circles, died this morning, aged seventy-four.

Randall Sinking Rapidly. WASHINGTON, April 11.—Representative Randall has been sinking very rapidly tonight and death is almost momentarily expected.

REMONETIZATION THE RACE.

Even the Tariff Agitation Yields to the Silver Question.

SENATE MONOMETALLISTS ALARMED.

Free Coinage Men Getting Very Aggressive—Lowa Civil Service Eligibles—Long Debate in the Upper House.

WASHINGTON BUREAU THE OMAHA BEE. 513 FOURTEENTH STREET, WASHINGTON, D. C., April 11. Two canons of republicans debating prospective legislation on silver with the main question of the day, "What shall we do to be saved?" It is the present situation here. A sufficient commentary upon the paramount interest excited by this most important subject to say that even the tariff yields to the question of remonetization. Both houses realize the difficulty of making any proposed bill a party measure. They recognize that the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues. At last night's conference at Senator Sherman's table, the republicans and even democrats alike will not be easily whipped into line for any bill which ignores the demand for free coinage. The senate monometallists are profoundly alarmed at the revolution in sentiment in the upper house and are holding a possible presidential veto over the heads of their more radical colleagues